

ONLINE DISSERTATION PROJECT

Tobias Fritz, Holger Kulemeyer

Dissertations play an important role in veterinary science. The structures of traditional dissemination of dissertations on exchange basis by libraries and recording through literature databases are changing. New ways of producing, processing, and recording digital items have to be found.

Electronic dissertations will serve as an essential constituent in building the virtual library. The future role of libraries, literature databases, and the internet in disseminating information about veterinary digital dissertations are discussed.

The background and the state of the project "Online Dissertations" of the Veterinary Faculty of Berlin are described.